About Virtual Learning College

Zubair Khan is the Founder and Head of College at Virtual Learning College, a registered charity (No. 1213091) and social enterprise, bringing over 20 years of experience in education leadership, alternative provision, and learner support. Passionate about improving outcomes for young people who face barriers to education, including those with SEND, autism, ADHD, anxiety based school avoidance, medical needs, and exclusion, he established Virtual Learning College to provide flexible, high quality online education tailored to individual needs.

Under his leadership, the college has built strong partnerships with schools, local authorities, healthcare providers, and community organisations, delivering personalised programmes that support both academic achievement and personal development.

Through live online teaching, accredited qualifications, and specialist support, the college helps learners build confidence, re-engage with education, and achieve positive outcomes, while championing inclusion, social mobility, and innovative approaches that place learners at the heart of everything it does.

Behind every attendance concern, exclusion, or barrier to learning is a young person with potential.

Our role is to help them realise it...
